This year’s featured gardens:

Linda Pat

10992 San Benito Way

Linda Pat, a longtime Little Forest Hills resident, is a master gardener. Her beautifully sculpted yard is made for wandering. Unexpected surprises greet the visitor at every turn - wander under the oak trellis covered by a large Lady Banks Rose to discover a secret meditation alcove. Linda specializes in visually stunning perennials.

Barbara & Alan Perkins

14786 Easton Road

The quaint cottage garden in the front belies the expansive maze of “secret rooms” found in the back yard of this spectacular 1930’s Arts & Crafts Bungalow. The unique, welded and forged steel gates and trellises provide modern architectural highlights in juxtaposition to the traditional plantings.

Bill Woods & James Hander

9268 Progress Parkway

Steel and stone sculptures, tile work, and blown glass blend in a colorful celebration of art and home at the Woods/Hander home. A path of decomposed granite leads you through this shade-covered garden. A cascading water feature perfectly accents this hillside paradise.

James T. Kirk

7956 Lawther Drive

This sprawling estate overlooking beautiful White Rock Lake is a Dallas landmark and is being opened to the public for the first time ever. Don’t miss this opportunity to see one of the most gorgeously landscaped, lush grounds you’ll ever experience. Special thanks to Mr. Kirk and his family for graciously agreeing to participate.

Mack and Jackie Bilzak

838 Audelia Road

This “little patch of heaven” is the result of 8 years of loving work that began when much of the existing yard was destroyed in a severe storm and fire. Mack and Jackie have filled the garden with unique plants, colorful birdhouses, and eclectic art pieces - each placed for a picture-perfect experience.

Steve & Edie Cook

111 Havenlake Dr.

This yard gets a gold star for originality and creativity. It truly must be seen to be believed. Prepare to be overwhelmed by the incredible aroma of the specially chosen bloomers, the brightly colored fences and furniture, and the serene sounds of numerous ponds and streams.
